About

Background

The Disability Royal Commission highlighted that individuals with intellectual disability often face inadequate healthcare and poorer health outcomes.

People with intellectual and cognitive disability have twice the risk of experiencing avoidable deaths when receiving hospital or community health clinic services. Similarly, those with disabilities and high support or complex health needs are more likely to pass away in the hospital rather than at home.

Queensland Health has taken a proactive step by relaunching the Julian's Key Health Passport, reaffirming its commitment to enhancing healthcare access and improving health outcomes for individuals with disability across Queensland.

What is Julian's Key Health Passport?

Julian's Key Health Passport is a consumer-controlled communication tool that contains important information about a person who is presenting themselves to a hospital or community health clinic.

It helps two-way communication between healthcare staff and Queenslanders with disability, especially those who may have difficulty communicating. It is important because it will help healthcare staff understand a person's health needs and preferences better, reducing misunderstandings and ensuring that the best care is given to a person in need.

Key messages

Healthcare staff

Julian's Key Health Passport is a two-way communication tool between a patient with disability and healthcare staff. It contains important health information about the patient with disability and/or how they prefer to communicate, especially if they are nonspeaking.

Julian's Key Health Passport is a tool designed to empower the patient to be involved in their healthcare and treatment decisions.

Always ask a patient with disability or their carer for their Julian's Key Health Passport before you treat them.

A patient chooses what information goes into their Julian's Key Health Passport.

Always ask a patient if their information is up to date.

The patient's Julian's Key Health Passport should always be returned to the patient once important information about them has been documented. It should not be kept in the hospital or community health clinic files.

Julian's Key Health Passport should be treated as additional or supplementary information about a patient. It does not replace routine assessment and care.

Consumers

Julian's Key Health Passport is a communication tool that has all the important health information about you.

Julian's Key Health Passport can help healthcare staff understand your health needs, reduce misunderstandings and ensure you get the best care possible.

You or your carer can choose what health information you want to share with healthcare staff.

You or your carer may change or add the information you want to share at any time.

You should always show your Julian's Key Health Passport to healthcare staff before they begin to treat you.

Julian's Key Health Passport is safe, it will not ask for your financial details.

You should always ask for your Julian's Key Health Passport back once healthcare staff have all the necessary information they need for your care.

Target audience

Primary

- All Queenslanders, especially those who need extra support, to communicate with healthcare staff.
- All Queensland Health workers (including permanent, temporary, and casual workers), contractors, volunteers, and students across all service types.
- All organisations and individuals who are in partnership with and/or acting as Queensland Health's agents.

Secondary

- Carers and support people of people with disability.
- Key stakeholder groups (e.g., disability sector representative groups, government, Commonwealth, non-government agencies, peak bodies).

eDM suggested copy (314 words)	Queensland Health has recently launched an updated version of Julian's Key Health Passport, a hand-held, consumer-controlled communication tool specifically designed for Queenslanders, particularly those with intellectual disability who may need assistance when communicating with healthcare staff. The Health Passport is a valuable tool for both users and healthcare professionals. It empowers users and involves them in their care and helps healthcare staff understand a person's care requirements, minimises misunderstandings, and ensures optimal outcomes. It allows individuals to update their health information as needed, especially when there are changes to their care needs. It solely serves as a communication tool and does not request nor contain any financial details. It is not meant to replace routine clinical care or treatment. The Health Passport comes in printed and print-at-home PDF formats and contains essential information about a person's disability, health needs, communication and treatment preferences, feelings when unwell, and their interests and hobbies. Users have the option to download the PDF, fill out relevant information for their treatment, and print only the pages with their information. Importantly, they have the freedom to choose who can access this information and when. Currently, users may download the digital version from the Julian's Key Health Passport website. Alternatively, they may request a printed copy by emailing Queensland Health at JuliansKey@health.qld.gov.au or by calling 13 HEALTH (13 43 25 84). Queensland Health is working with the community to understand their needs and consider the design of a digital solution for Julian's Key Health Passport. The primary goal is to develop a more user-friendly digital solution that will make it easier for users to complete and manage. We've created a suite of resources to help share and encourage the use of this important tool. You can download these resources from the Julian's Key Health Passport website: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Factsheets • Video & audio files • Posters • Digital assets • Social script • Bedside poster • Social media tiles. 	Link
